Barge Traffic On River Is Revived

Bridge Machinery Fulton To Calion By Water Route

Craft 30x60 Loaded With Tons of Machinery for Bridge Work.

ROUTED VIA 3 RIVERS

Down Red, Up Black and Ouachita To Calion Bridge Site.

A gasoline launch chugging along down Red river, in its wake a barge, 30x60 feet, loaded with an assortment of tractors, cranes and other bridge-building machinery weighing well up into the tons—and water transportation in the upper reaches of the river is a reality.

Kelher Construction Co., who is now completing the building of the bridge across Red river at Fulton, was recently awarded a contract for the bridge across the Ouachita at Calion. All of the heavy machinery and material necessary for preliminary work was at Fulton, no longer needed there because only finishing work is now being done. That stuff must go to Calion. How?

The answer was simple: The company had two large barges used in the work at Fulton. They merely loaded one of them with the equipment desired, hooked a tow line to a motor launch and started it on its way.

The journey began today. The barge will travel down Red river to where the Black empties in. Then it will turn its nose up Black river to that stream's confluence with the Ouachita and up the Ouachita to the bridge site. The trip will consume several days, covering the more than 800 miles without a stop unless necessitated by accident or motor trouble.

Minister Sobs As Tells Love's Trials

Aimee's Mother Pictured As "Fast Worker" By Former Sweetheart.

SEATTLE, Oct. 3.—(AP)—Details of an alleged "whirlwind courtship" involving Rev. H. H. Clark, former Seattle minister, and Mrs. Minnie E. Kennedy were due for an airing in court here Wednesday in Clark's $50,000 breach of promise suit against the mother of Aimee Semple McPherson, evangelist.

Clark was called to the stand Tuesday, but his story remained unfinished when court recessed for the day. A judicial order excluded from the court room girls under 18 years of age during the taking of testimony.

The former Seattle minister testified that he first met Mrs. Kennedy in a Seattle motion picture theatre and described some of their subsequent meetings in hotels and restaurants here. Clark charges that Mrs. Kennedy, under the alias of "Mrs. Clark," wooed him persistently, promised to marry him and agreed to build him a tabernacle here and equip a "gospel ship" for evangelistic work along the Pacific coast. He alleged she later refused to keep her promises.

Clark broke down and sobbed when he described the mental reaction which he said he experienced when he found Mrs. Kennedy had "deceived" him.

Duck Hunters Cheered By First Duck Weather

Of course, the duck season is quite some distance away but the weather this morning caused many an old hunting rig to be dug out and inspected to see if it would stand another season's wear, the old 12-gauge treated to a thorough cleaning and a touch of oil on working parts.

For it is the beginning of duck weather. Wind in the north, chill in the air, a misty rain peppering down. What else does your real duck hunter wish? The old bird dog to do the retrieving, a bunch of good leffers at the camp when the day's shooting is done—oh, well, who wouldn't get out of them.

New National Commander Is Most Valuable Citizen In El Dorado and Was Awarded Community Loving Cup

EL DORADO, October 3.—(AP)—Major O. L. Bodenhamer, new national commander of the American Legion, has been a resident of El Dorado for eight years. He is 39 years old and unmarried.

He became active in civic affairs as well as in the Legion soon after reaching here and was chosen last year as the most useful citizen in the city and awarded a silver loving cup. He is president of the El Dorado Chamber of Commerce, past president of the Arkansas Deal Estate Dealers Association, former member of the Arkansas Honorary Tax Commission and has held various other honorary offices.

Following his discharge from the army at Camp Travis in the spring of 1919, Major Bodenhamer entered the real estate business at Brownwood, Texas, later at Waco and then to Oklahoma and Florida, coming to El Dorado in 1921.

Major Bodenhamer enlisted in an officers' training school at Leon Springs, Texas, a month after America entered the war. A month later he was made a captain and sent to Camp Travis. Later he was transferred to Camp Okla-thorpe, Ga., where he remained until in the spring of 1918 when he was designated instructor on rifle range and sent to Camp Perry, Ohio. He there remained until August, of that year, when he was promoted to major and sent to Camp Travis with the 19th Infantry.

He is a native of Goldthwaite, Texas, educated at Howard Payne and Baylor University. After receiving his degree he became professor of English and dean of San Marcos college, acting as coach for athletics on the side. He resigned his school position to enlist in the army.

Tells Story of Metal Business Ira Halliburton and J. M. Harbin Appear On Kiwanis Program

The story of the sheet metal business was told to Kiwanis club at its luncheon meeting today at the Capital hotel, by Ira Halliburton, of the Halliburton Sheet Metal Works.

Originally called the tinning business, from the itinerant tinker who traveled the length and breadth of the land fixing pots and pans, it gradually developed into the sheet metal business. Mr. Halliburton said, to do justice to its wide variety of metals and uses.

Mr. Halliburton illustrated the new and strange uses to which sheet metal is being put by calling attention to several well known Hope houses which are roofed with what appears to be tile, but is in reality imitation tile manufactured from moulded sheet metal.

Following Mr. Halliburton on the program was J. M. Harbin, of the Hope Retail Lumber company, who gave an autobiographical sketch that ranged from Indiana to Missouri, and finally to Hope, where he has been engaged in the saw-mill and retail lumber business for many years. Like printer's ink, which is said to stick to a man always, Mr. Harbin said he found that "once a lumberman always a lumberman."

Chap Weltman presided at the luncheon in the absence of President John P. Cox, who was reported in Dallas visiting his son. The program was in charge of Mr. Halliburton.

Federal Agents To Probe Killing

Department of Justice Men To Investigate McPherson Murder

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—(AP)—Special Department of Justice agents were assigned today to an investigation of the death of Mrs. Virginia McPherson, pretty young nurse found strangled to death with a pajama cord in her Pennsylvania avenue apartment two weeks ago.

The announcement was made by Attorney General Mitchell and is one of the few times recently when the vast resources of the Federal government have been requested by District of Columbia officials to solve crimes.

The case was once closed by a coroner's jury as suicide but was reopened on demand of Senator Overman, of North Carolina, home state of the murdered woman.

Cotton Price Occupying Senator Hefflin's Attention

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—(AP)—Senator Hefflin, of Alabama, announced today to the senate agricultural committee that he would shortly ask an investigation by the senate to determine if there was "conspiracy to depress the price of cotton."

U. S. Engineers Approve Routing 67 Through Hope

Resort To Court Is Threat of Property Owners Off of Route.

DELAY ROAD WORK

Route Adopted Is Only Feasible One In Opinion of Surveying Men.

The much discussed question of the routing of Highway 67 through this city is at last about land in the courts. Property owners off the proposed route have retained W. S. Atkins as counsel. To urge retention of the present route.

The old highway ran north of the Missouri Pacific track and wound and twisted its tortuous way through town. The new comes from the Fulton bridge on the south side of the tracks, a direct line from the bridge to the west end of Third street in this city.

Survey after survey was made of tentative routes through Hope, each discarded when federal highway engineers turned thumbs down. Desire to avoid grade crossings and eliminate dangerous curves—even though those crossing might be gate-protected—was paramount with the engineers, and they flatly refused to endorse any winding, twisting way.

Many of the streets in Hope are not full-length. That is to say, they do not traverse the city from east to west. To route highway on 16th street was to detour the city. Front street was too narrow and congested with local traffic. North of the track meant grade crossings and sharp turns.

The route finally approved is from the city limits on the west down Third to Walnut; north on Walnut to First; east on First to the city limits and on to an underpass, thence veering back north to the present route. This is the routing which, in all probability, will be that adopted when the road is completed.

To Pave Next Year

Work of building the new highway from Fulton bridge to Hope is progressing satisfactorily, dump being made with more speed than expected, and drainage culverts and structures keeping up with the rest of the work.

Paving will not begin until next spring, it is believed, as the rains of winter and early spring, with the traffic the road will bear after it is opened will settle the roadbed to where paving will not crack when put on.

Prohis Form New Central Agency

Co-operative Committee for Enforcement Organized at Washington.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—(AP)—An active, unified effort for the prohibition was forecast by the formation here of a new central agency to co-ordinate the activities of the country's many prohibition organizations.

The new organization, formed at a conference of a score of prohibition leaders, will be known as the Co-operative Committee for Prohibition Enforcement. It expects to have the support of all the leading prohibition agencies, including the Anti-Saloon League. Its headquarters will be in Washington and its chairman is Patrick H. Callahan, the Louisville, Ky., business man who has long been prominent nationally as an official of the Association of Catholics favoring prohibition.

The program of the new committee is to represent, in Washington, all prohibition agencies and to be prepared to meet any attack either upon the prohibition laws or their enforcement. It is planned to lay a scientific groundwork for a campaign of education as to the benefits of prohibition. An outstanding economist will be asked to report the reaction of the dry laws on industry. Another investigation will be made into the effect on health and hygiene and a third will compile data on the relation of liquor to crime. The detailed plans will be announced shortly by Mr. Callahan.

Sheriff Takes Outing and Says Feeling Fit Already

Sheriff Dorsey McRae, personally conducted by his wife, was out Wednesday, taking in the sights of the city and being warmly greeted by many friends.

According to Mrs. McRae, the sheriff is gaining weight about as fast as Edgar Lasseter's big watermelon, i. e., a pound a day and insists continually upon investing in more groceries. "If my appetite keeps up this way after I'm well," Mr. McRae said, "I'm ruined. But it sure is time to be able to eat again after being on short rations so long."

"Yes, I'll be up to court next week, but I won't be doing any hard work nor running any foot-races. Not for a while yet."

State Mines Are Heavy Producers

Aggregate of Coal Mined Last Year Reaches Staggering Sum.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—(AP)—Arkansas mines in 1928 produced 1,680,973 tons of coal which had a value of $5,615,000, according to figures made public today by the bureau of mines of the U. S. Department of Commerce.

A total of 4,092 employees were engaged in the production of coal in the state, of which 661 were surface employees, or executives and clerical help.

Sebastian county, with 792,021 tons, led the coal producing counties of the state in total production. Value of its products was $2,054,000.

Johnson county was second with 292,008 tons, with a value of $1,291,000. Franklin county was third with 274,972 tons, with a value of $824,000. Logan was fifth, with a production of 191,643 tons with a value of $801,000.

Logan county's product brought a higher return than the other counties, according to the figures. Each ton of coal mined in this county was valued at $4.70, compared with $4.33 for Johnson, $5.00 for Franklin and $2.59 for Sebastian county.

Sebastian, with 1,400 employees, led in the number of men engaged in mining. They worked on an average of 183 days during the year, producing 3.09 tons to the man.

Johnson county was second with 1,329 men engaged. They worked an average of 90 days, producing 2.19 tons per man.

The average for all the coal producing counties was 164 working days, with a production per man of 2.79 tons.

Mining by hand accounted for 9,505 tons of the total coal production of the state, with 892,363 tons "shot off the solid," 615,804 tons cut by machines and 107,164 tons mined by stripping.

Fall Presbytery To Look Into Smith's Evolution Holdings

LITTLE ROCK, Oct. 3.—(AP)—Orthodoxy of Rev. Hay Watson Smith, Presbyterian minister of Little Rock whose views on evolution were censured at the last session of the General Assembly of the church, probably will be considered at the annual fall session of the Arkansas Presbytery to be held here October 12, Rev. J. P. Stevenson, Moderator, of Walnut Ridge, announced today.

Dr. Stevenson would not indicate what course would be taken by the Presbytery.

Dr. Smith is pastor of the Second Presbyterian church here, said to have the largest membership of any Presbyterian church in the state.

Popular El Dorado Man Wins Honors At Annual Meeting

Vote Comes From All Parts of Country Favoring State Man

ACTIVE CIVIC LEADER

State Delegation Went To Convention On "Commander Special"

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 3.—(AP)—O. L. Bodenhamer, of El Dorado, Arkansas was today elected National Commander of the American Legion the election climaxing one of the warmest and most thrilling campaigns in the history of the Legion.

The election of the Arkansas man was made unanimous on motion of Albert L. Cox, of Raleigh, N. C. who had been regarded as the only other serious contender for the Commandership.

When the nominations started, Alabama, first in the list, yielded to North Carolina and Cox rose and placed Bodenhamer in nomination and asked that his election be made unanimous. This was done in a burst of applause.

Bodenhamer is the first man in the history of the Legion to be elected National Commander without a roll call. After the election, the delegates staged a scene reminding one of a national political convention. State banners were torn from their places, paraded the hall and taken to the stage and Bodenhamer was carried to the platform on the shoulders of the Arkansas delegation.

The Little Rock drum and bugle corps appeared on the stage, playing vigorously, and for ten minutes a joyous pandemonium reigned.

Reality and Civic Leader
O. L. Bodenhamer, a native Texan, came to Arkansas in 1921, locating at El Dorado where oil had just been discovered. He headed the Bodenhamer company, which developed many of the residential subdivisions of that new city, and became prominently identified with the investment and banking business there.

He is president of the El Dorado Chamber of Commerce, and has served for several years on the good roads committee of Union county.

His work for the American Legion in Arkansas dated from the first day he entered this state. He is generally credited with having built up the El Dorado post so that for several years it maintained the largest membership of any post in Arkansas. Major Bodenhamer was post commander many times, and served once as department commander of Arkansas.

During his service with the state department he traveled to every county in Arkansas, and became one of the best known men in the commonwealth. Upon relinquishing this office he was advanced to national committeeman from Arkansas, which post he has held for the last four years.

Was Due This Year

He was a serious contender for the national commandership two years ago, and ran third in the contest at San Antonio last year.

Called out on a speaking tour this spring and summer, Major Bodenhamer covered most of the Western and Southern states, and the adhesion of the delegates of these sections made his election at Louisville almost certain.

Lowthorp Back From A Sojourn In Louisiana

C. S. Lowthorp, who knows his watermelons and also a few things about the brokerage business, is home from a brief stay in various parts of Louisiana. He reports he was there on business, but from the number of orders wired in for watermelons of the 25-10 pound variety he must have been telling the folks something of the size of the growth down here in Arkansas.

Schwab, chairman of the Bethlehem Steel Company; Eugene Grace, president of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Company; Senator William E. Borah, sponsor of the investigation.

The program for the afternoon was under direction of the first gave the treasurer's report, which A delightful program was given with all of the little folks taking an active part. There was a Halloween reading by a number of the little girls and boys, followed by a song.

Then the P. T. A. sang "America the Beautiful" and the "P. T. A. Song."

After the meeting was turned over to the president, Mrs. gave the treasurer's report, which was especially interesting.

This report proved beyond a doubt what Brookwood can do if it sets its hand to the wheel. The

Antlers Elect All Officers for Year

Youngsters Show Plenty of "Pep" In Putting Things In Order.

The Order of Antlers, junior organization of B. P. O. Elks, held a business meeting last night, chief business being election of officers to serve the ensuing year. The youngsters went at the matter in a business-like way and bid fair to outdo their older brothers, the Elks themselves, in the rapid dispatch of business.

Officers elected were: Granville Darwin, president; George Hutson, first vice president; Willis Plant, second vice president; Bill Wray, third vice president; Talbot Field, Jr., secretary; John Greene, treasurer.

The Antlers' program for the coming year is an ambitious one and will provide plenty of activity for the youthful fraternity members if they live up to it.

A Small-Town Triumph

If memory serves us correctly, it was Henry Ford who some years ago gave the metropolitan real estate agents something to think about when he said that industry had stopped concentrating its factories in the great cities and was establishing its newer units in the small cities and towns.

Recent developments are giving added force to Mr. Ford's prophecy. The South, which has probably the fewest great cities of any section, has had the most important industrial boom of the decade. Arkansas, a very moderately developed Southern state, has obtained more new factories in the last three or four years than for half a century previous.

So much for industry and the small town. Now comes Sherwood Anderson, the novelist, and tells us what the small town can do for a man.

Some of our readers may remember the sensation Mr. Anderson caused a couple of years ago when he suddenly withdrew from New York and purchased the two weekly newspapers at Marion, Virginia. As the New York Times Magazine reports it, the sheriff writes the political editorials for the Democratic paper, while the postmaster does justice to the editorial columns of the Republican sheet. Mr. Anderson fills in the news columns of both with personal items gathered from the country-side.

Reflecting on his experience he tells the Times Magazine:

"There are values in a small town you cannot get in a big one. There is the sense of sun and rain and the stars. There are neighbors and their problems, their affection, their kindness. There are crops and cattle in the near-by country, which are the very stuff of life. And there is bass fishing just over the hill.

"You see—the fact is that my way of living here represents a working compromise with the machine age. It is a kind of truce with industrialism and with all the forces that are trying to standardize every phase of American existence.

It's a satisfactory kind of job. There's a great deal of craftsmanship in a country editor's work. He fills a human need that the machine age disregards, and I think it may be a solution for a certain type of man who cannot bear to be a cog, to do the same thing in the same way over and over again. A country paper still has the quality of a thing made by hand."

The Passing of the Pharisee

DR. JAMES LYONS BIGGAR, national commissioner of the Canadian Red Cross society, makes a comment on our current definitions of civilization that is well worth considering in detail.

Any definition of civilization which leaves out the word "humanitarianism," says Dr. Biggar, is not a good definition. To his mind, the essential feature of this modern civilization of ours is man's growing concern over the ills and misfortunes of others.

"Our Civilization," he says, "is moved, as no earlier civilization was moved, by the miseries which are revealed to it. In the old days the enormously preponderating majority were of the Pharisees, who saw the wounded traveler and cared not, but passed by on the other side. Today the Good Samaritan is beginning to dominate the situation.

"In times past the answer to the question, 'Am I my brother's keeper?' was 'No.' Today it begins to be 'Yes.'"

Proof of Dr. Biggar's statement is furnished by the very existence of the organization he heads—the Red Cross.

There is further proof of it in the daily course of events everywhere.

Let a hurricane strike a West Indian island; let an earthquake knock down a city in Japan; let a famine bring misery and death to a valley far in the interior of China; let a flood sweep away homes in the Mississippi valley—and instantly, from thousands of miles away, contributions of money, goods and services start coming from thousands of people.

We are getting more neighborly, more thoughtful, more kindly. And that, in a world that has never had enough of any of those qualities, is cheering news.

Let the Chips Fall Where They May!

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNE YDUTCHER

WASHINGTON—Colonel Horace A. Mann comes barging onto the political horizon again some months after he was commonly supposed to have been spuriously sent.

Colonel Mann is the big mystery man who is given a great deal of credit for helping break up the Solid South last fall on behalf of Mr. Hoover. By the time Mr. Hoover was inaugurated it began to look as if Colonel Mann's only reward would be something less than a few kind words accompanied by a gentle shove back into the comparative obscurity from whence he came.

But it was Claudius Huston who brought Mann into the presidential campaign and now Huston is chairman of the Republican national committee and it is understood that Mann will be given the peace-time equivalent of his former job, as southern campaign manager, which means that he will have a place behind the patronage pie counter in the south.

He Has a Hot Temper
Mann is a Tennessee lawyer who has specialized here on tax cases, with a large practice before the Bureau of Internal Revenue. He is somewhere around 50 years old, tall and heavy and pleasant in manner. Not a great deal else is known about him here, else he wouldn't qualify as a "mystery man." At work, he is something of a driver and is apt to lose his temper. He can be thick-skinned and hard-boiled, as he proved in the campaign.

It was Mann who sold the idea to Huston and Hoover that the Republican ticket could pick up a few states in the south as the result of widespread hatred of Governor Al Smith. Until election night most political experts—including many Republicans, thought the idea was a joke. But, meanwhile, Mann had been given some money an told to go ahead.

Mann recognized the extent of the potential 'southern revolt' against Smith. He realized that little or nothing could be done to capitalize it if national headquarters depended upon their so-called Republican organizations in the south. The complexities of these organizations were too often black and their methods although unsavory to attract support from any considerable number of anti-Smith Democrats.

So Mann proposed to aid and encourage the anti-Smith Democrats to organize by themselves. It is no known just how or when he sold the plan to Hoover, but it was definitely sold because Mann was taken in from outside the party organization and appeared to be responsible to no one but Hoover himself. Dr. Hubert Work, the national chairman, seemed to think very little of the idea and he and Mann worked quite separately.

He Worked Very Quietly
The colonel parked himself in an inconspicuous office in the Munsey building, far away from the national headquarters. He had a few scouts and agents who worked for him in the south and he himself received the visiting Hooverists as they came to Washington for money or other aid. One young woman, working for a Democratic newspaper, went to Mann's office and reported that she had been sent along to the Ku Klux Klan newspaper here to gather ammunition for the good work, but Mann denied it.

He worked in the dark. No news issued from his office. His was the gumshoe office of the campaign. He sent money and Ezekiel 27: The wealth and glory of Tyros and the prophesied fall of that ancient city. The chapter concludes thus:

Thy rowers have brought thee into great waters: the east wind hath broken thee in the midst of the seas. Thy riches, and thy fairs, thy merchandise, thy mariners, and thy pilots thy carriers, and the occupiers of thy merchandise, and all thy men of war, that are in thee, and in all thy company which is in the midst of the seas, shall fall into the midst of the seas in the day of thy ruin. The suburbs shall shake at the sound of the cry of thy pilots.

And all that handle the oar, the mariners, and all the pilots of the sea, shall come down from their ships, they shall stand upon the land; and shall cause their voice to be heard against thee, and shall cry bitterly, and shall cast up dust upon their heads, they shall wallow themselves in the ashes; and they shall make themselves utterly bald for thee, and gird them with sackcloth, and they shall weep for thee with bitterness of heart and bitter wailing.

And in their wailing they shall take up a lamentation for thee, and lament over thee, saying, What city is like Tyros, like the destroyed in the midst of the sea? When thy wares went forth out of the seas, thou filledst many people; thou didst enrich the kings of the earth with the multitude of thy riches and of thy merchandise. In the time when thou shalt be broken by the seas in the depth of the waters thy merchandise and all thy company in the midst of thee shall fall. All the inhabitants of the isles shall be astonished at thee, and their kings shall be sore afraid, they shall be troubled in their countenance. The merchants among the people shall hiss at thee; they shall be a terror, and never shall be any more.

Bobcats To Invade Camden Friday

Eusel Coleman Takes His Squad Over To Battle Brother's Forces.

Friday morning Coach Eusel Coleman and his fighting Bobcats of Hope III will hit the highway for Camden where, in the afternoon, they are scheduled to mix with the aggregation of pigskin chasers coached by Sam Coleman, brother of the local man.

When the teams, coached by brothers, met here last year, it was a royal struggle, neither side being able to score. This year each brother has, in improvise, superior aggregation—and each is after the other brother's scalp, athletically speaking. Which makes it appear that Camden football fans will have an opportunity to witness some real sport.

The locals are in good shape, the coach reports, and he expects to come back to Hope Friday night, each at his warriors with a day-hawk scalp dangling at his belt.

AN ANCIENT PREJUDICE HAS BEEN REMOVED

Legally, politically and socially woman has been emancipated from those chains which bound her. AMERICAN INTELLIGENCE has exploded the ridiculous theory that forced the stigma of inferiority upon a sex.

"toasting did it"

Gone is that ancient prejudice against cigarettes—Progress has been made. We removed the prejudice against cigarettes when we removed harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from the tobaccos.

YEARS ago, when cigarettes were made without the aid of modern science, there originated that ancient prejudice against all cigarettes. That criticism is no longer justified. LUCKY STRIKE, the finest cigarette you ever smoked, made of the choicest tobacco, properly aged and skillfully blended—"It's Toasted."

"TOASTING," the most modern step in cigarette manufacture, removes from LUCKY STRIKE harmful irritants which are present in cigarettes manufactured in the old-fashioned way.

Everyone knows that heat purifies, and so "TOASTING"—LUCKY STRIKE'S extra secret process—removes harmful, corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from LUCKIES which in the old-fashioned manufacture of cigarettes cause throat irritation and coughing. Thus "TOASTING" has destroyed that ancient prejudice against cigarette smoking by men and by women.

"It's Toasted"—the phrase that describes the extra "toasting" process applied in the manufacture of Lucky Strike Cigarettes. The finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—are scientifically subjected to penetrating heat at minimum, 260°—maximum, 300°, Fahrenheit. The exact, expert regulation of such high temperatures removes impurities. More than a slogan, "It's Toasted" is recognized by millions as the most modern step in cigarette manufacture.

Athletics' One-Man Catching Staff Has Big Edge Over Chicago Quartet

It will be four men against one when it comes to catching in the world series but the A's with Micky Cochrane will be stronger than the Cubs' four-man outfit of Taylor, Gonzales, Schulte and Hartnett.

The A's have Cy Perkins but they don't need him and probably won't use him unless Mickey is hurt.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—(AP) Philadelphia's one-man catching staff will have four Chicago catchers opposing it in the world series. Yet it is a sure bet to be on the long end when the 1929 classic is over.

And it probably would be the same if this one-man catching staff was opposed by any four hand picked men in the majors.

For Micky Cochrane is the A's receiver. He is the class of big league catchers. Furthermore he is about one-half of Connie Mack's ball club.

Opposing Cochrane during the big battle between the A's and Cubs will be Zachary Taylor, Mike Gonzales, John Schulte and the crippled Gabby Hartnett.

It Hartnett was back in his 1928 form it would be a different story, in fact it might be a close struggle. "Gabby" could outcatch any and everything in the National league up until 1929.

But the big Chicago star has been out of action all season with a bad throwing arm and it is doubtful if he will do much more than pinch hit during the coming series.

Schulte, Taylor and Gonzales are just ordinary mask and pad performers. They are conscientious, hard-working ball players but they haven't that great natural ability that marks the difference between mediocrity and stardom.

Mickey seems to have everything and, naturally, is the key man in the Athletics' lineup. He handles pitchers intelligently, throws swiftly and accurately and has been the A's cleanup batsman for four years. That means he can hit that base-

Innocent Cheat

By Ruth Dewey Groves
AUTHOR OF "RICH GIRL-POOR GIRL," ETC.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Helen Page feels hopelessly in love with her handsome guardian, Leonard Brent. A chance meeting with a dying beggar, Charles Nellin, causes Brent to change his plans for Helen's future. Soon after he tells the girl that according to a promise given her parents, he is now to reveal her identity and that she is the only grandchild of a millionaire, Cyril K. Cunningham. Brent takes her to Cunningham and offers proofs which the lonely old man accepts. Hoping to make up for the injustice done her mother, Cunningham showers the girl with affection and gifts and she learns to love him.

Among Helen's new friends are Eva Balle and her brother Robert, who falls in love with her. Brent finds another locket which matches the one he had taken from Nellin to establish Helen as the heiress. He also becomes jealous of Bob and plots to secure the girl for himself quickly. Hearing the doctor say that a sudden shock would kill the old man, Brent gets the servants out of the way and rushes into the sick room shouting wildly that Helen has been killed.

His plan works and when the attendant returns, Cunningham is dead. Then Brent appears as friend and former guardian of Helen and takes charge of arrangements.

Brent had amused himself by making love to Eva and now he tries to break off the affair without making Helen suspicious.

Meanwhile, Bob is too proud to speak his love until a chance meeting breaks his reserve.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXVII

Bob took the dish Helen offered him and put it on a nearby table. His eyes had not left her face.

Helen felt his gaze leveling the intangible barrier that a moment before had made them merely two hungry young creatures turning their search for food into a kitchen lark.

She knew that Bob had discovered something new in her—something that overwhelmed him. For his understanding glance had followed a look of slow-dawning surprise.

It was as though he saw her for the first time, and the vision had startled him. Then there flashed into his eyes the eternal truth of love. He saw the girl he knew he must have. Saw her without the forbidding background that had stopped him even before her subsequent indifference had made wanting her an idiot's aspiration.

Perhaps it was the domestic touch; perhaps the hint of laughter at the corners of her mouth—mating laughter, the soft, satisfied notes that are heard only in the intimacy of a happy home. Perhaps it was the exquisitely feminine line of her creamy throat, perhaps the effect of her appearance in an apron had something to do with it.

Whatever it was Bob kissed her. Helen was gasping for breath when he released her. He had not let her go voluntarily. She had struggled out of his arms, though she was never to be without a yearning to return to them.

"Don't expect me to ask your forgiveness," Bob said as she stood off from him, desperately trying to control her voice for speech. "My love for you is something I will not apologize for."

In spite of the flood of despair that Helen felt engulfing her, she experienced a thrill of happiness over his declaration. This was no toy lover, to kiss and say "I'm sorry."

"No," she said, "no I would not want you to. Only . . . Her choked utterance broke and left her helpless with only her tear-filled eyes and unsteady lips to tell him that she must strike at his happiness.

"What is it?" Bob was ruthless with the rush of premonition that came to him.

Begone Helen answered he burst out bitterly: "I didn't get so far as to imagine I could have you. Just fanning you was enough to blind me to reason."

"Yet, you were blind," Helen cried; "blind as could be, else you would have seen that I did not want this to happen."

Bob's answering laugh was as mirthless as a dirge. "So you anticipated it?" he asked.

Helen looked at him with unashamed honesty deep-seated in her unswerving gaze.

"I thought of it," she said simply. "You say that, and expect me not to kiss you again?" Bob was a trifle wild.

Helen hesitated, drew in her breath sharply and said: "I expect you never to kiss me again."

Bob too hesitated, weighing her tense sincerity for its true value. "I do not obey injunctions as blindly as I love," he threatened.

"I shall tell you why I make this one," Helen replied fighting to keep her voice level and clear. "I am engaged to marry . . ."

She stopped, unable to bring Brent's name to her lips.

Bob stood as though turned to steel. Across his eyes pain flickered back and forth like a shadow. Helen turned her face away and gulped back the sob that rose in her throat. His silence was an unbearable reproach.

"I thought once," she said with a fierce desire to defend herself, "that it would be . . . that I'd like to have you kiss me."

She heard him stir; heard his half-suppressed exclamation. She put out a hand. "Wait," she entreated, Bob did not move.

"That was when I first met you," Helen hurried on, scarcely aware of how she was bearing the truth between them; "but I . . . I thought I was in love with someone else."

"And you promised to marry him?" Bob supplied, too painfully unhappy to be conscious of his lack of originality.

Helen's head dropped in assent. "You can't keep such a promise now," Bob cried, reaching out to grasp her shoulders. His fingers sank deep into her flesh and Helen winced, but she did not struggle to free herself. "You can't I say?"

Bob raved. "Helen, do you know what you said? You thought you loved him! Don't you see what that means?"

"I've promised," Helen said weakly.

Bob's hands fell to hers, held them tight. "Helen," he pleaded, "Helen why didn't you give me a chance? I love you so. I might have made you care for me a little."

Helen's lips twisted into the semblance of a smile. "Would it be right to marry on just a little love?" she asked.

"Better than none at all," Bob declared. "And you don't love this man. I know you don't. Not even a little bit. You are mine, Helen. Right now I could kiss you—no, grip again and he was helpless against the inevitableness of their parting.

"I love you, I love you, I love you!" The words pounded over and over again Helen's quivering lips but she refused them utterance.

Bob would know—it would be easier if she did not say it. "Helen," he pleaded in a rush of despair; "you aren't going through with it? You aren't going to marry anyone else?"

"I must, if he still wants me," Helen told him.

"Of course he will want you! But can't you see what a beast that would make him if you tell him you don't love him? How can you think of marrying such a man?"

Helen could not restrain a faint smile. "Perhaps you misjudge him," she said, "and he may not care so much as you think."

"You know in your heart that he does," Bob retorted.

"But I mean to tell him about this," Helen appeased him, "and ask him to break our engagement."

Bob looked deep into her eyes before answering. "You kissed me goodby a moment ago," he said quietly. "We both know that, Helen. Why do you try to deceive me with false hopes now?"

"Oh, I'm not, I'm not," Helen cried. "I'm telling you all the truth. But I'm afraid. You have, in a way called all men beasts, for you say any man could seek to hold me—hold the girl he loved—whether she cared for him or not."

"You knew you would have to refuse me before I said that," Bob answered.

Helen swayed against him and he fought with himself to keep from crushing her to his breast. Yes, she admitted scarcely above a whisper, "Yes, I knew that, Bob."

"How?"

"I don't know. It was just a feeling but I'm daring to hope that I am wrong—that we will be allowed to take our happiness."

"That's up to you," Bob retorted rather harshly. "This isn't the day for foolish mistakes about love, Helen. If you are sure about yourself—if you know that you do not love this man—it is unforgivable of you to marry him."

Helen tried to answer his honest gaze with one as equally frank, but she knew that the complexity of her situation was worlds removed from the direct path he pointed out to her.

There was, for instance, the debt she owed to Leonard Brent. (To be continued)

BEWARE THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs. Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

War On Scrub Bulls Will Continue Until All Gone County Agent Declares

Meetings are being held in different communities this week for the purpose of placing enough bulls to insure the unloading of a car load of pedegreed animals last week in this month according to County Agent Lynn Smith.

At the dairy banquet held two weeks ago orders were placed for four and since 20 other communities need such animals it is expected to have enough orders placed within the next week to insure the end. The DeAnn community will decide definitely at a meeting which will be held there Thursday night whether or not such an animal will be bought in that community. Columbus will have a meeting Friday night, and make a decision at that time.

The sire which will be purchased wherever they can be conveniently found will be from 15 to 18 months old and will have no blemishes worthy for our purpose. A committee of two or three men who know dairy cattle and who will be able to read a pedigree will be selected to do the buying.

Your editorial in the Hope Star, October 2nd on Football was appreciated. I think your statement of the case is timely and well expressed. The officials and teachers of the Hope Schools are thoroughly in sympathy with any movement that will give us a better and stronger team. They are anxious to have a strong well-guided athletic association that will be able to send out a football team, every member of which is eligible and worthy of the school which he represents.

Your statement concerning the support given the Bobcats in the past by the citizenship of Hope is entirely correct and we hope that your editorial will bring about better co-operation.

We shall appreciate your co-operation in school matters.

THIRTEEN PROMINENT IN "OUR MODERN MAIDENS"

If the number thirteen is a jinx, "Our Modern Maidens," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new epic of jazz, a Joan Crawford starring vehicle which comes Friday to the Saenger Theatre with a sound synchronized score, ought to be fairly saturated with voodooism instead of the spirit of youth. Almost everything in it comes to thirteen.

Production on this new ultra-modern picture started on Friday, when Jack Conway directed the first scene. There are exactly thirteen people in the cast, including the various bit and part players. The sets all numbered in the studio's bookkeeping department, were all in the 1300 classification. The picture was finished on the thirteenth of the month and the last scene was number 213, as listed in the script.

To make matters worse the unit production manager, Ulrich Busch has just thirteen letters in his name!

The picture, an original by Josephine Lovett, author of "Our Dancing Daughters," has one married couple in it. That is the star, Miss Crawford, and her newly required husband, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. Rod La Raque, Anita Page, Josephine Dunn, Eddie Nugent Albert Gran and others of note make up the cast of thirteen principals.

Full proof that Director Conway is not superstitious lies in the fact that the filming of the picture was completed without a mishap. And just before he started the picture he received a Christmas gift in the form of a watch with thirteen jewels.

"What sort of a time is your friend having on his motor tour?"

Texas Sheriff Goes Half Way Round World to Get His Man

business-like detective of famous Scotland Yard, insists upon "getting his man," no matter how long it takes.

Which is why A. B. Crouch, former prison broker of the nearby city of Temple, Tex., is now in jail at Levensville, New Zealand, awaiting return to Texas for trial for an offense committed 13 years ago.

Thirteen years and 12,000 miles—ordinarily that would be enough time and space to put a man well beyond the reach of the law.

But Sheriff John R. Bingham of Bell county, Texas, who journeyed all the way to New Zealand to get Crouch, is nemesis personified.

Crouch disappeared in the spring of 1916.

Members of a prominent Bell county family, a college graduate and a capable and popular business man, he had established himself as one of the leading grain brokers in Texas. One night he vanished from his home, leaving letters to friends stating that he was disappearing forever, to begin life anew in a distant land.

After his departure it was discovered that two Temple banks had been swindled out of $125,000 by forged bills of lading and other documents. These forgeries were laid at Crouch's door.

Then began the search—the 13-year search. Only recently came success.

In far-away New Zealand a real estate man known as John Grey was found to be Crouch. The fugitive broker had established himself in a pleasant town half way around the world, and was confident that he had left his past far behind him.

Now, Sheriff Bingham is absent on his long trip to get Crouch and bring him back to Texas for trial.

The search took 13 years and extended half way around the earth. But a Texas sheriff makes a specialty of getting his man.

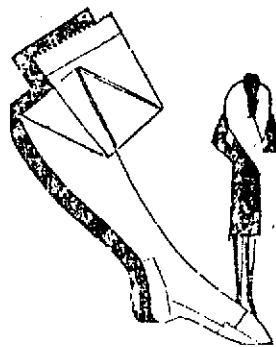

"Are you saving any money since you started your budget system?" "Sure. By the time we've balanced it up every evening it's too late to go anywhere."—Arkansas highways.

"I'm going to buy a new gown. What shade would you like to see me in?"

"In the shade of the old apple tree."—Arkansas highways.
